

George Mason Police Department

The mission of the George Mason Police Department is to provide a safe and secure environment to all faculty, staff, students, and visitors to all George Mason campuses. Our team uses a community policing approach to collaborate with administrative offices, University Life, student organizations, and other law enforcement jurisdictions and agencies within the area to provide the safe and secure environment. We are successful in this when students feel safe on campus and can focus on their academic studies and student life objectives.

Officers of the George Mason University Police Department are fully-certified Virginia state law enforcement officers that work collaboratively with other local law enforcement agencies in every jurisdiction. The goal of our collaboration with other agencies is to provide a safe and secure environment both on and surrounding all George Mason campuses. As members of the George Mason Police Department, we are heavily involved in the community both inside and outside the classroom. Many of us are enrolled in classes, just like you, and will be easy to spot on campus through our police vehicles, on foot patrol, or on our bicycles. Please feel free to say hello!

Services

The police department offers fingerprinting at our Fairfax campus. We also offer 24/7 safety escorts for anyone that may feel unsafe walking from a building to their car or from building to building at any point during the day at any of our campuses. On our website we have an anonymous tip form should you want to submit an anonymous tip about any activity you see on campus.

How to reach us

The best way to communicate directly with the George Mason Police Department is through our 24/7 dispatch center by calling 703-993-2810. If you see something suspicious report it through our tip form or via phone. Students can also get involved with us by liking our page on Facebook or following us on Instagram @gmupolice.
